Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant's arguments are not persuasive. Applicant argues that claimed relationship of the indentation surface and its relationship with a fowardly oriented section thereof and a first reference plane are not shown in the applied art. It is the position of the examiner that the claimed reference plane is an abstract concept and can be arbitrarily selected. No claim structure has been provided to define the reference plane and forward section in any substantially limiting manner. Therefor, it is still believed the applied rejection is proper.
